Socratic Café

“The unexamined life is not worth living.”

-Socrates

What Is It?

A typical group meets in a public place, is open to anyone who wishes to attend, and discuss a question which is chosen by vote or which is announced shortly in advance. Typically there are no prerequisites, and no reading or other preparation is required.

The Socratic Cafe is patterned after the way Socrates conducted learning activities in Ancient Greece. All participants were expected to share their thoughts and opinions regarding the written and spoken word. They were further encouraged to read, analyze and evaluate the philosophies governing the society in which they live.
